in 1957. The president of grub is the first ben endevil. There's a free public library in the hollow at the bottom of hill hill. There are a couple of driving schools. There's a real monster truck show in a huge barn behind the house on the last Friday in september. Jodi works at the goodner at the hollow bottom of the hill. Her favorite job is to change the music at a certain time during the evening and dance to the music. Jodi and a few other goodners also pick up the cigarette butts that litter the parking lot and throw them into the massive garbage can. They are now planning to plant a garden and grow some vegetables. The goodners also clean the water fountains and bathrooms. Many kids who live in the hollow come to play in the goodners' playground at the top of the hill. It's a big rectangular metal building with a giant slide and a flying fox. Most of the houses in the hollow were built in the 1800s. The color scheme of the houses has changed over the years. All the houses are very colorful and have large lawns with flowers and shrubs. There are over thirty kids in the hollow who attend a ketchup on top of a hill school. There are three school buses that run on the paved road that runs through the hollow. For decades the biggest problem in the hollow has been gangs of tweakers and potheads who hang out in the parking lot of the goodners. There are two entrances to the hollow. One is near the railroad tracks and is called the windy way. The second is just a few blocks away and is called the dead end. There is a black car that is always parked at the dead end. A few years ago the homeowners association voted to close down the dead end road because the tweakers and potheads were getting so loud. A beautiful street in the middle of the hollow has been paved and named "hill hill." Jodi, her mother, her little sister and the other goodners have planted flowers and shrubs around the neighborhood. They have also planted a beautiful flower garden on the side of hill hill. A massive rock pile has been built on the side of hill hill. There are hundreds of rocks laid in a rectangular shape. Over the years the goodners have added staircases, ramps and bridges to the rock pile. They also painted over the graffiti that has been written on the rock pile over the years. They 82157476af
